Established in 1892 under the Societies Registration Act XXI of 1860, the Khalsa College Charitable Society Amritsar is a beacon of educational excellence. Functioning as a non-profit, non-commercial, charitable society, it embarked on its educational journey by introducing graduate classes in 1897, initially affiliated with Calcutta University. The college's architectural marvel, seamlessly integrating Mughal, Rajput, and Sikh styles, has gained worldwide acclaim.

At present, the society oversees a network of 19 educational institutions, comprising schools and colleges, collectively catering to over 40,000 students. The efficient management is orchestrated by the Khalsa College Charitable Society, Amritsar, boasting a membership of over 100 individuals, including distinguished educational administrators, seasoned educationists, accomplished industrialists, and eminent public figures. Their extensive experience in establishing and managing diverse educational institutions, including those in technical and professional domains, ensures the college's trajectory towards unparalleled success. Guided by such luminaries, Khalsa College is poised to reach greater heights, steadfast in its commitment to realizing its mission and goals.

ADMISSION'S

The admissions procedure for students from out of state or region is typically handled by a specialised unit called as "Admission Cell (Other State)." The admissions office's stated goal is to simplify the procedure by which applicants from out-of-state are accepted, evaluated, and ultimately chosen. They make sure that applications are complete, deadlines are met, and applicants are kept in the loop. The admissions team works hard to keep the admissions procedure open and honest. They create evaluation and selection criteria, carry them out, and make sure that all decisions are done fairly and without prejudice. Applicants from other states can get help from the admissions team. They detail the programmes that can be joined, together with the prerequisites, application steps, and due dates.
